

Managing District Level Communications

With the Public

Victor M. Edwards III

South Carolina Department of Transportation

December, 2013

Problem Statement

Over the years, the South Carolina Department of Transportation (SCDOT) has attempted to meet the public's desire for accessibility and transparency by adding additional methods of communication. SCDOT is comprised of 46 counties divided into 7 districts. District 4 of the SCDOT consists of 7 counties: Cherokee, Chester, Chesterfield, Fairfield, Lancaster, Union and York Counties. Each District receives multiple input sources including Central Tracking System (CTS), Customer Service Hotline, Highway Maintenance Management System (HMMS), letters, phone contacts, emails, and personal contact and attempts to answer the public's questions in a consistent and efficient manner. While each system is useful in its own right, the possibility exists that the systems can overlap and create situations where answers can be different and thus confuse rather than clarify a concern/question from a customer. While there is anecdotal evidence that this has happened in the past there is currently no swift or easy manner in which to review if a customer's concern has been answered already by another engineer or via another input stream.

Providing swift and consistent answers to concerns is an integral part of the SCDOT Strategic Management Plan. It is the desire of the SCDOT to provide information to the public in a clear and concise manner of their choosing, and in a manner that is efficient and transparent. To that end the department continues to find new ways for the public to contact and communicate more directly with engineering staff.

This project will focus on three of these data input systems, and attempt to identify if there is redundancy in the three systems and/or the amount of time spent in reviewing old data to determine an answer. It is also hoped that some means can be identified so that records coming into the office can be quickly scanned to provide a higher level of consistency to various concerns. The systems to be evaluated by this report are the Highway Maintenance Management System (HMMS), the Customer Service Center (CSC), and the Public Email Request Tracking (PERT) System. HMMS and CSC are statewide programs while the PERT system is a District 4 only system for tracking email sent to the SCDOT webpage as well as other written requests.

In the digital age in which we find ourselves, once a citizen files a concern via an input source the concern is routed via a number of steps to a specific party to answer. Currently there is no quick way to find either the final person or department that answered a specific question or to determine what the answer to the question was. All Engineering offices at the District are providing feedback to SCDOT Headquarters in Columbia that any particular issue was received and resolved. However, locating the answer in the future when a similar problem or another issue occurs involving this same person or roadway can take a long period of time.

Data Collection:

In order to identify any redundancy, a finite set of data needed to be identified. It was decided that all records from the 3 different input streams would be obtained from 1/11/2011 until 5/1/2013 (27 months). Below is how data was obtained from each system as well as the stakeholder at the District 4 level that monitors the particular program and reports back to the correct department in Columbia once the concern is addressed.

In order to normalize the data sets, various pieces of data had to be drawn out of each of the 3 systems and then compiled into a single location. While several alternatives were considered, it was decided that a Spread Sheet offered the best way of capturing the data in question. It was quickly determined that not all data was available in the same manner and that no two programs recorded some of the pieces of data the same way.

Also, to provide a benchmark for determining how useful any solution would be, a brief email query was sent to all Departments within the District to determine how much time was spent in reviewing and answering any concern that occurred in any of the three Data Streams in question.

While the spreadsheet can be seen in the Appendix, the following items were tracked:

System	: The system from which the concern was generated.
(number)	: A key or id number that set this record apart from every other.
First Name	: First name of the customer
Last Name	: Last name of the customer
Road Name	: Name of the Road. This is the manner in which a majority of the community knows the road.
Road Design	: Route designation, Interstate, Primary (SC or US), Secondary
Road Number	: Manner in which the SCDOT records all roadways as many roads may have the same name within just a single county.
County	: the County in which the problem exists.
Date	: The date that the concern was received.
Resol. Dept.	: Construction, Traffic, Maintenance, District Eng. , or Other.
Type Request	: The manner in which the receiver of the concern felt it should be "coded". In many but not all situations this also determines which department of the district will respond.

Highway Maintenance Management System (HMMS) – Julie Young/Rusty Snider

The easiest of the three systems to aggregate data from was the Highway Maintenance Management System. District personnel were able to define a query which gathered all requested data available. Data from HMMS is stored in a central Database in Columbia. Input of data into the HMMS system can be done either by the customer themselves via weblink (<http://dbw.scdot.org/workrequest/>), or one of approximately 30 SCDOT employees within District 4 if the customer decides to call in a concern. Once entered, data is directed by the Administrative Assistant to the person they feel can resolve the concern. Since this program is one large database, data was therefore easily recovered via a query to the database for all records between the two target dates.

Customer Service Center (CSC) – Susan Morris

The second system reviewed was the Customer Service Center (CSC). This system is coordinated via a call center at the SCDOT Headquarters building in Columbia. The customer may, via a toll free number, speak with a Customer Service Representative. The call center then logs the concern via a 3rd party database before forwarding to the appropriate district. In District 4 both District Engineering Administrator (DEA) John McCarter and Administrative Assistant Susan Morris receive it. Then once Mr. McCarter determines who on staff should answer the issue, it is forwarded from Ms. Morris to that office. Ms. Morris then follows up with that office to make sure the concern gets resolved. Once resolved she makes Columbia aware that the situation is completed. While a representation of this data in a manner consistent with HMMS was not immediately available, SCDOT - IT Services was quickly able to develop a query to the database that CSC utilizes.

PERT – Juanita Abercrombie

The last system to have data extracted from it is the District 4 Public Email Request Tracking (PERT) system. This system derives its data via email to the SCDOT webpage or written letter. Once Columbia receives the information it is forwarded to DEA McCarter who determines who in District 4 will answer the question. At that point the email is forwarded to Administrative Coordinator Juanita Abercrombie. Ms. Abercrombie assigns it a file folder identification and sends it on to the person that will provide an answer. Unfortunately there was no way discovered to quickly aggregate this data, therefore each record was gone through individually to identify the necessary data.

Data Analysis:

Key findings and patterns or trends

Not all desired data was contained in all data streams. Therefore a spreadsheet was developed that contained the information that identified each individual record. As there is no central input platform, all data is currently unable to be aggregated to provide an overall picture. Without a central way to aggregate the data, matching data to find redundancies or review prior responses to a concern is difficult and time consuming.

Sorting the data via roadway and first name produced 193 records out of the 1795 (11%) that were Potential Duplicate Requests for Service. While some of these duplicate records were found to be on the same day or within a 5 day period, some were duplicate requests over a 6 month or more period.

Number of Categories used in representing the Data: 73

Review Period: 27 months

1221 HMMS requests

502 PERT requests

72 CSC requests

Amount of time to research a request to provide an answer to a customer: 30 mins to 2 days.

During the development of the data set, four different occasions arose where a request needed to be researched that the district engineers felt had been answered previously. In three of the cases the amount of time to find records and reply to the customer with an already existing answer was between 3-5 minutes. In the fourth case, staff recalled that a similar concern had been addressed some months prior to the request. However, a quick review of the rough spreadsheet showed that the concern had not been answered previously, thus saving precious time looking through various files for something that did not exist.

Potential causes or factors to the problem

All data is handled by multiple sources before arriving at a final destination to be answered. Many examples were seen in reviewing the data where many days would pass between receipt in Columbia and the final person answering the concern.

It became quickly apparent that while all data streams had similar data, not all streams had all the data. While the PERT data had no way to identify each record, the HMMS system did not readily identify what Engineering Department provided the answer and it recorded both first and last name as a single field. The CSC system provided no ready way to identify the category of the concern that the customer had. Furthermore while both the CSC and HMMS systems were part of a Database and as such could be queried to find specific data if it was available, the PERT system was simply kept as a conglomeration of files utilizing an overarching file coding system.

All three systems were developed in a closed environment, and while the developers may have been aware of the sister systems, there seems to have been no attempt made to obtain the exact same information or to provide an overseer system. This means that anyone that wants to research to see if a similar answer has been provided has no immediate or quick means to do so.

Based on the various Engineering Departments' responses to the survey, up to two days goes into researching and providing an answer to any particular concern. It is unclear, given the way the data was analyzed, that once a concern is forwarded to an Engineering Department within the District if the question has been asked/answered via a separate department or data stream. However the 193 duplicates over a 2 year period indicate that 11% of the concerns are reported either on the same roadway or by the same person.

Implementation Plan:

It is important for the SCDOT to provide a swift and consistent answer to the public in the manner of the public's choosing. Providing an overall solution to managing all of the data included in this report would require altering programs outside of the Districts direct influence (HMMS and CSC). However, it is possible that with a central clearing house (overseer) type of program, spreadsheet, and database, that a short amount of upfront work could result in a great time savings.

If made simple to use and therefore easily utilized when answering concerns, such a program could help all Engineering divisions to provide a consistent answer when redundant requests are received. Such a program can be developed in-house via Sharepoint or Excel Spreadsheet within 6 months. Since it would be constructed within the district, cost to implement such a solution will be minimal.

Time is a limited commodity. As such, it is likely some Administrative Specialists and Engineers may feel any type of "new" overseer program will be one more program from them to have to learn and then utilize and as such be very resistant to any change. However once shown the time savings that can be obtained from even the rough database, it should become obvious how helpful such a tool can be. The time savings and other benefits can only be communicated to all stakeholders via a short training session, and by it being mandated from the District Engineering Administrator.

Action steps

- A prototype spreadsheet is developed to determine the important “pieces” of information in regards to answering a customers’ concern.
- IT produces a Database via SharePoint to bring data from the 3 separate programs together on a monthly basis.
- Administrative Assistants input data into program from PERT and CSC while routing the requests to the various Engineering Departments via direction from District Engineering Administrator.
- Engineering Departments are shown how to utilize the program to quickly research all data and determine if the question has been previously answered.

Evaluation Method:

Once the overseer program is put in place, and stakeholders are allowed to utilize it for 3-6 months, another email survey will need to be sent out to determine if any savings were being found. This should be evaluated as well as the data input into the overseer program to determine if the District is still receiving redundant requests and if so, if they are being answered by the same department and/or with the same answer. Data should be evaluated every year at a minimum to make sure that the program is doing what it is designed to do.

Data evaluation should take minimal time, as all data will be stored in a central program. While this program may have several people inputting and retrieving data from it, all the inputs should be consistent with a front form of the database. As the data will be input by the Administrative Specialist directing the concern, the number of categories representing the data should reduce over time, thus making redundancies even more obvious.

Summary and Recommendations:

Today’s customer expectations are higher than ever. Customers want to interact with SCDOT on their own terms and receive a timely and accurate answer to their concerns. While the SCDOT wishes to deliver this information we currently have no manner in which to marry disparate programs together to make sure we are not answering the same question in multiple fashions. When a customer receives an answer, it should continue to be the same answer despite the method of contact utilized or the person answering it.

To this end, this report has shown inconsistencies in three currently operating programs that if combined in some fashion could provide not only a consistent answer, but an answer in a faster timeline. Reducing the time to answer a customer's concerns will allow the engineering departments to spend more time on engineering better solutions to various issues.

It is vital to provide customers and communities of people with answers that are consistent. Applying minimal input work up front even with the rough spreadsheet can lead to some improvement. However if pursued further and an oversight database is developed, the various engineering departments can quickly review the person and/or roadway of concern to provide the same answer, even if a year or more has passed between the initial request and any follow up concerns. While every engineering division answering a question may provide a different perspective to an answer, knowing how the concern was originally answered and building on that answer provides an empathy with the customer that is currently not available.

A system should be established at some point along the information path to provide the sender an automated response to assure them that their request has been received, and is being evaluated. Whether this point is at the point of origination or once the request arrives at the District is unclear. A process improvement would be if all input streams were put into a central "dump" or "clearing house". Further study is necessary however as it is unclear if providing such an information dump where the problems do not have to wait to go through multiple people before being answered might improve speed of response it could also result in multiple responses by separate departments.

Once implemented, the program should continue to look for future ways to tie back a customer's request to the HMMS Daily Work Request that is produced when work is done by SCDOT crews on the roadway. In this fashion our District could not only meet our customer's desires for information but determine in a very clear and concise way that once there is a request how it is handled and the time between evaluation and execution.

Further process evaluation could prove beneficial with the PERT program which showed the longest period required to answer a concern from a customer. Several redundancies existed when a person utilized another input system since they have not received a "receipt" or verification that their email had been received. While the process cannot be controlled when the person contacts Columbia, an evaluation of the overall PERT system could provide a number of improvements to reduce time to answer a concern.

Subject: Pothole on Doby's Bridge Rd near Lynnwood Farms Road

Last Friday (about 6:30 am) my wife encountered a significant pothole westbound on Doby's Bridge Rd just before 3468 Doby's Bridge (just before Lynnwood Farms). It produced a blowout and flat tire front passenger-side. Fortunately she did not lose control and was able to maneuver onto Lynnwood Farms Road. She called AAA for assistance. When AAA removed the wheel we noted that the alloy hub was cracked and that the wheel will have to be replaced.

How do we report this pothole?

Is there a form we can submit for consideration for financial compensation for the cost of a new wheel and assciate service? If not, how do we go about submitting a claim?
